

My face!

Hello— I'm Polina. I'm a software product manager with a background in computer science, interfaces design, physical product design, art, and political science. My interdisciplinary background is a reflection of my approach to process- not as something set to be perfected once and applied each time, but as a toolkit which I'm constantly growing, and from which I can choose what is most relevant to the challenge at hand.

Previously, I've shipped trans-inclusive functionality at a top EMR company, worked on an award winning smart teddy bear for pediatric health, and run a nationally recognized design consulting studio. Find me here on the internet.
